Beginning with the report of the deadly Texas A&M Bonfire collapse in 1999, professional engineer Marshal Yeager is confronted with widespread government corruption under Governor Rick Perry as giant interstate homebuilding corporations partner with the State of Texas to undermine smaller homebuilders and deny homebuyers and professional engineers their First and Seventh Amendment rights, ultimately contributing to the collapse of the worldwide economy. Marshal learns too late that his investigation of the Sandra Bullock house case has drawn the attention of a globalist superlawyer and his engineer-henchmen. Does the corruption go as deep as the Texas Board of Professional Engineers? Marshal learns the answer as efforts are made to undermine Marshal's clients and his professional career—actions that even result in the death of one of Marshal's clients.
